The (in)flu(ence) of decadence

The following article is translated from the September 2020 issue of the NSDAP/AO's Italian language news bulletin.

The signs are all there. Like a patient who presents the typical symptoms of a disease, the so-called western society presents a textbook case of unstoppable decline. Incurable, hopefully. We really hope to be able to put an end to the therapeutic obstinacy operated on a now corpse-like society that has nothing else vital to give to present and future generations. We have everything: the loss of values, the erasure of memory, identity, traditions and history that characterize a healthy and vital society. We are witnessing the latest gasps in recent months, where a relatively "low-level" pandemic (if compared with potential pandemics of diseases that are far more dangerous in absolute terms) is revealing the total weakness and ineptitude of world leaders. Whatever political orientation or color they may be, governments around the world are totally defenseless and

Comrade Delle Chiaie, PRESENT!

The following article is translated from the September 2020 issue of the NSDAP/AO's Italian language news bulletin.

September 9 marks the first anniversary of the death of Camerata Stefano Delle Chiaie, a key figure in the Italian social right of the second Italian post-war period. A man of unshakable political faith, he was one of the greatest examples of political coherence and decision-making, the result of a creative personality like few others.

Born in 1936, the comrade Delle Chiaie was never a lukewarm or moderate, just know that he began his political career at 14 years in the Italian Social Movement, from which, however, he left very soon to follow Pino Rauti in the Centro Nuovo Order Studies (the group from which the political movement New Order neg 60s will be born, founded by some on its members). In short, from the very beginning he was certainly not one who went very much for the subtle. Within the movement, in controversy with the leaders, he founded the Revolutionary Armed Groups (GAR) in 1958, proclaiming himself in a frontal clash with the democratic system and leading a campaign for mass abstention.

At the beginning of the 1960s he abandoned Rauti and founded the anti-communist and fascist movement of the National Youth Vanguard, self-dissolved as a result of the pressure exerted by the repressed laws (Scelba) in 1965

On 1 March 1968, during the first student demonstrations in Rome, Delle Chiaie took part in the student procession at the head of the Roman group of the dissolved National lacking in initiative in responding to an emergency which, leaving aside imaginative theories, should be tackled in a simply pragmatic and scientific way.

And here instead we have the Mask Party against the No-Mask Party, for which wearing or not wearing a health protection device becomes a political act of deployment in a presidential campaign (see United States) that identifies the individual. We have the Chloroquine Party supported by the so-called Right and the Superplasma Party. What does all this mean?

It is clear that even those who had placed hope in the "right turn" of countries such as the United States, Brazil, Hungary, etc. in recent years must deal with the fact that, although better than social democratic governance, this ultra-liberal right is proving to be a dangerous enemy of the people. Pure poison. Those who are National Socialists cannot stop at the nationalist proclamations of a right which, honestly, of "social" has nothing more, but rather responds to liberal logics that are deadly poison for the European peoples. How can we now trust those who advocate a capitalism without rules, a reality governed only by the market, profit and exploitation of the worker? How can respect for cultural identities be expected from those who work to eliminate the racial element for profit?

All of us, in Italy and in Europe, are absolutely ready for an identity shift towards the authoritarian state, but can we really expect it from bankruptcy billionaires? From "nationalists" who wear kippah at the first opportunity to ingratiate themselves with the Zionist potentates?

Avant-garde, together with other groups. When the procession reached Valle Giulia, the road was blocked by a police cordon and the situation rapidly degenerated into the clashes that remained known as the "Battle of Valle Giulia".

"While many continued to limit themselves to requests for university reform, we argued that starting from the university the contest should extend in the political and social field. Here, beyond the aspect of the square and "military", Valle Giulia had this meaning: to make everyone understand that the dispute was political, not just a student one. »

In this period contacts between the National Avant-garde and the National Front of Junio Valerio Borghese began.

The massacre in Piazza Fontana took place on 12 December 1969 (in the center of Milan, at the Banca Nazionale dell'Agricoltura which caused 17 deaths and 88 wounded) and bombs exploded in Rome at the same time. Mario Merlino, friend of Delle Chiaie and former militant of the National Avant-garde, is arrested together with five other militants of the anarchist circle March 22. Merlino initially did not involve Delle Chiaie, but then, in the need to provide an alibi for his travels on 11 and 12 December. When he was called again to testify, in 1970 Delle Chiaie, warned of the danger of being framed (from what innocent he was and what will later be declared) he decided to take refuge abroad.

He was also accused of taking part in the attempted Borghese coup in 1970, where, according to Athos De Luca, member of the massacres commission, on the night of December 7, 1970 he commanded the unit composed of National Avant-garde militants who entered the offices of the Ministry of Interior. Summoned, he claimed to be abroad in those days, precisely in Barcelona.

Starting from 1970 Delle Chiaie hid in Madrid in Spain where he came into contact with the Aginter Press directed by the former officer of the Organization armée secrète (OAS) Yves Guérin-Sérac, which had its main office in Lisbon. In 1973, contacts began with the New Order Political Movement, heir of the old "New Order Study Center", which under the leadership of Paolo Signorelli, had been dissolved in authority on charges of reconstituting the dissolved Fascist Party. Meetings were then launched in Spain with Delle Chiaie in order to study the unification of the two movements. At the time, the National Vanguard was not yet on trial. The new political subject, based on a meeting that took place in Albano Laziale in September 1975, in which Delle Chiaie and Paolo Signorelli participated, should have assumed the name of National Avant-garde for the New Order, but the hypothesis jumped about three months later during a new meeting held in Nice.

During a 1974 trip with Junio Valerio Borghese to Chile, Delle Chiaie met Augusto Pinochet whom he met again in 1975 in Madrid, on the occasion of Franco's funeral. Following this meeting, he decided to move to Chile where, from 1976, he had an office in Santiago de Chile available for his group where he dealt with propaganda and counter-information on the style of the Aginter Press.

In 1977 he moved briefly to Argentina and in 1978 to Bolivia, where he had contacts with President Tejada and met Klaus Barbie who, under the false name of Klaus Altmann, was then Bolivian security adviser.

In 1982 an arrest warrant was issued against him in Italy in the massacre in Piazza Fontana and on August 2, 1982 there was a first attempt at arrest entrusted to French mercenaries while he was in Bolivia. Warned by one of these, all the former avant-gardists did lose the traces of Delle Chiaie who hid in Caracas in Venezuela.

On March 27, 1987, after seventeen years in Latin America, he let himself be arrested in Caracas to be extradited to Italy.

At this point he was tried and acquitted on February 20, 1989 "for not having committed the fact". Judgment confirmed on appeal on 5 July 1991 when he was also acquitted of the charge of subversive association.

Even the investigations carried out on him in the context of the massacre in Bologna on 2 August 1980 do not ascertain any responsibility against him and the statements of some witnesses who wanted to involve him were either elusive or unconfirmed. He is acquitted again, because "There is no evidence of direct involvement of the National Avant-garde or its representatives in the massacre in Bologna and in the other attacks in 1980, they are missing or have been found to be false."

Delle Chiaie who, upon returning to Italy, had founded the press agency Publicondor, attempted to reintegrate into political life and, in October 1991, organized a meeting between historical figures of the extra-parliamentary Right in Pomezia, Lazio Nationalpopular), which was also attended by Adriano Tilgher, who later became leader of the National Social Front.

The meeting sanctioned the birth of a new political formation, the Popular National League, because the newborn movement would like to extend its organizational and militant formula to the entire national territory, albeit with different ideas. The new movement included former Missini exponents, others from the extra-parliamentary area on the right. At the political elections of 1992 the Popular National League appeared on the lists of the League of Leagues, which gained little success and disappeared some time later, after changing its name to the Popular National Alternative.

Delle Chiaie died on the evening of 9 September 2019 at the Vannini hospital in Rome, a few days after his 83rd birthday.

Of him remains the testimony of a complex life, often at the limit, made of struggle, sacrifice, commitment and enthusiasm. A Man, a Conductor, who knew how to inspire his comrades, a leader who never bowed, who did not deny anything and who remained faithful to the idea that a New Order based on the purest and most crystalline values, as well as maturing them, to which you can inspire us.

Camerata Stefano Delle Chiaie, always and forever PRESENT!

Questions and Answers

Did the Allies really win WWII, considering that half of Europe ended up in Russia's totalitarian regime?

Define "Allies?"

The COMMUNISTS clearly WON WWII. And the "Western democracies" HELPED them do it!

Why?

According to Churchill's memoirs the real reason for WWII was that Germany developed an economy that made it independent from the international banks.

This also explains the eternal demonization of the Third Reich despite the fact that - even IF one were to accept the Hollywood atrocity propaganda - Stalin killed far more people than Hitler.

No "collective guilt" for Russians! Unlike Germans! Even today, long after the war ended. Most Germans today were not even alive back then.

Why?

Powerful special interest groups suppress - and in many so-called "democratic" countries even OUTLAW - any OBJECTIVE examination of the Third Reich and World War Two.

Who benefits from this?

First, those "international banks" do NOT want people to examine the German economic miracle of 1933-1939. The German economic recovery was based on the PRODUCTIVE labor of the German people. NOT a PARASITIC financial system that later led to the Great Recession of 2008. (In the USA this parasitism has also led to the 40 year decline of the middle class, unaffordable health care, unaffordable higher education, the loss of manufacturing, and soaring national debt!)

Second, the power Zionist lobby enjoys the "sympathy points." (U.S. foreign policy is heavily influenced by special interest groups. This has disastrous consequences for many countries, including America itself.)

Third, although this PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE was initially used primarily against Germany, it is now being used against ALL of Western Civilization, namely to undermine resistance against the genocidal large-scale Third World invasion promoted by today's "global elite."

German "collective guilt" over the "Holocaust" has been expanded to include American "collective guilt" over "slavery" and European "collective guilt" over "colonialism".

The goal and end result is destruction of the sense of ETHNIC IDENTITY.

This undermines the very foundation of nation-states. And that, in turn, increases the power of supranational/globalist forces, be they financial or political or both.

This is why an objective examination of historical events like the Third Reich and WWII are important even today and even outside of Germany!

The (in)flu(ence) of decadence

It is no coincidence that this void left by a non-existent social right is useful for movements that openly advocate the cancellation of any identity ambition of the white European peoples. From the wildest iconoclasm (reminiscent of the most violent anti-cultural actions of Islamic fundamentalists) to the open will of racial destruction ("Whites are subhumans, genetic errors to be corrected and canceled" thundered a Canadian exponent of the Black Lives Matter movement three years ago ...) the white holocaust is more and more real, the cancellation of the Aryan race proceeds at full speed, with the complacency of these rights that promise us identity but only give us back inertia and indifference.

Peoples suffer, they are on their knees (literally) for the sole crime of claiming their identity, they no longer have any living space and now risk further catastrophe brought on by a manageable disease that is not meant (intentionally) to be managed. It will be interesting, when all this has passed, to take into account which races have been most severely culled by the disease. It will give us the measure of what the White Lives are worth for our leaders.
